MANDY BARNETT

Grand Ole Opry member Mandy Barnett, one of Nashville's enduring musical treasures who has showcased her mesmerizing voice on stages across the globe, started singing at five years old. She has been singing since. Barnett's style is rooted in the classic country and pop crooning of iconic singers and timeless sounds. She delves into a song with a keen interpretative sense, getting right down to its emotional core and rendering a powerhouse performance through her "pipes of steel" (Los Angeles Times). As one record executive put it, "Mandy Barnett is a song's best friend."

LANDAU EUGENE MURPHY, JR.

Landau Eugene Murphy Jr. first burst onto the national conscience as the Sinatra-and-Soul singing season six winner of NBC TV's "America's Got Talent" with his incredible voice, undeniable charisma and unparalleled showmanship. And a decade later, he's still going strong! Seeing Landau in concert is a revelation; backed by the dynamic Landau Big Band, you'll always hear swinging arrangements of Great American Songbook classics from Frank Sinatra, Dean Martin, Nat "King" Cole and many more, along with a dusting of that special Motown Magic that is sure to move your feet and make you stomp along.

After the show, every show, you'll always have the opportunity to meet Landau one-on-one for photos and have the chance to talk with him about his incredible rags-to-riches story. "It's my favorite part of the night; it's something we always do. Sometimes I'm the last one at the venue, talking to fans and friends."
